

If you anticipate having trouble with your mortgage, there are COVID-19 policy changes that may help relieve your financial burden.

Credit Counseling Center is open and ready to help you with delinquency concerns.

Credit Counseling Center is conducting appointments by phone.
Call us at 215-348-8003.

The Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency (PHFA) recently issued a halt to any foreclosure actions or evictions against any of its home loan customers who may be in default. This policy will remain in effect until impacts from the virus subside. During the health crisis, the agency will stop all negative credit reporting for its mortgage customers.

Credit Counseling Center is a PHFA- and HUD-approved agency. We can help you contact your current lender to explore options available for you.

Other Ways We Can Assist During the Coronavirus Crisis

As confusion and misinformation about finances and COVID-19 abounds, we can help! Our trained professional counselors are here to help with:

- which bills to pay first
- mortgage issues
- credit cards concerns
- bankruptcy questions
- student loan payments.

Please contact us, or if you know anyone struggling with financial concerns, please forward this information. We hope all of you are staying healthy during this time of social distancing.
